CYLINDRICAL SEALS.

562 Three: Hæmatite, a god and worshipper and three lines of inscription: DINGUR DINGUR MAR-TU . . . UMUN MAO SUM-MU "The God Hadad of the Storm-flood . . . The Lord (?) who gives"—Diorite, three figures, and a winged deity seated—Hæmatite, two standing figures before Ea, a sceptre behind and a lion rampant, and above the moon and stars 3

563 Three: Hæmatite, a worshipper and the god Ninsah and three lines of inscription: NIN-SAH SU-ZI-AN-NA GISHAD UR SU-DU "Ninsah crown of heaven, the sceptre of glory holding"—Diorite, two standing figures and the moon god, a small seated figure between—Hæmatite, three standing figures, one carrying an animal, one with an upright spear before him, and one with a crescent-topped sceptre and two lines of inscription 3

564 Three: Hæmatite, the divine attendant of the seated moon-goddess A-a leading a man worshipper into her presence and two lines of inscription D. P. SAMAS D. P. A-A "The Sun-god, The Moon-goddess," beneath the inscription an animal and before the goddess a vase—Brown stone, four standing figures, the crescent moon and another emblem above—Cornelian, archaic cutting, figures of birds or winged insects 3

565 Three: Hæmatite, in the centre a deity as a warrior holding a mace facing an approaching female in adoration, and behind the deity another figure holding up some emblem, two lines of inscription, as far as it can be read: TA . . TA . . APPANI-ILI ARAD D. P. RAMMANI "Appani-ili servant of Rimmon"—Brown stone, within a panel a man standing before Shamash, and outside, a divine attendant leading a man before Astarte, with sun and moon above—Shell, archaic cutting, two insects in combat 3

3 566 Three: Hæmatite, two standing figures considerably worn and three lines of inscription: DINGUR DINGUR MAR-TU PA-TU GIS-KU "The God Hadad of the Storm-flood ... The Sceptre (and) the Sword"—Diorite; Gilgamash and Ea-bani fighting a lion and an oryx—Hæmatite, a divine attendant leading two persons into the presence of Sin the moon god 3

11 567 One: Greenish-grey schist, a mythological scene on a rocky ground, the beginning and end divided by two lines of inscription: GISTIN-US DUP-SAR "Gistin-us the Scribe," and underneath a lion passant, to the left a man in a horned and pointed hat carrying a staff or arrow walking towards a winged goddess standing on an eminence, while on a similar eminence the god Ea, the creator, is placing one foot, streams of water with fishes in them flowing from his shoulders, and a bird flying down before him, a bifrons figure next the inscription completes the scene do

* * This cylinder is thoroughly described by Professor Pinches in "The Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology," Nov. 8th, 1911, in which he contends that "All the indications therefore point to the probability that Mr. Offord's is the original ancient cylinder, and the British Museum duplicate [that of Adda the Scribe] is a copy of it."

2 10 568 Four: Hæmatite, two figures before the moon-god, and two lines of inscription; another, similar, inscription has been erased; another, three standing figures, inscription nearly erased; and aragonite, Gilgamash and Ea-bani fighting a lion, two lines of inscription 4 do

1 15 569 Four: Red stone, roughly cut and much worn, two figures before the moon-god, but curious as having three scorpions placed horizontally, the meaning of which is not known; two others, each with four figures and no inscriptions; and one, white stone, with two standing and one seated figures and a sacred tree 4 do

5 570 Four: Hæmatite, three standing figures, one holding a stick or bow, behind another with arms outstretched towards Ramman the thunder god, whose emblem a rod with three zig-zag rays stands behind him; another, with Sin and another figure, abraided; green stone with Gilgamash and Ea-bani fighting a lion, and in an enclosed panel a bird and an oryx; and Green stone, a worshipper between Gula the sun goddess and A-a the moon goddess, and an attendant with a sword behind Gula 4 do

3 10 571 Eleven others, hæmatite, diorite and other stones, and shell 11

The Property of Edward J. Elton, Esq.

of Burleigh Court, Gloucester.

- 605 A BRONZE HEAD OF ATHENA, wearing helmet, two-thirds of life size, total height, 13 in.

A cast in varying thickness of metal which is worn through in places; part of the upper surface of the crest is thus lost but this does not affect the fine outline.

The helmet is well modelled and nicely decorated; the horsehair crest ornamented at the sides with rosettes. From the front of the helmet project the head and necks of five horses in a row, below them a band encircles the brow terminating, on each side of the head, in shields or buckles bearing full faced masks of giants. The back of the helmet is garnished with a design of volutes from which springs the neck piece. This is carried well forward on each side below the ears and is decorated with hippocamps.

The treatment of the eyes and hair is somewhat archaic but the face is pleasing in expression. Except at the neck, which is damaged where broken off from the body, and as above mentioned, this bronze is in good preservation, unrestored and well patinated. A rare and attractive work; Graeco-Roman; Circa 1st cent. B.C. [Pl. V]

[Published by the Society of Antiquaries; see Archaeologia, vol. LXXIII-IV, 1924. A copy of the paper on the subject by Professor E. S. Forster, F.S.A. Feb. 8, 1923, is shown with the bronze].
